

Young, Single and Homeless In Denbighshire?

- What it means
- What can happen
- Who can help

Leaving home is a massive step to take.

There can be some real financial hardships – especially if you are under 18. But if you have to leave home it's best to get advice first – from a teacher, housing options officer or advice agency, such as Shelter Cymru, Citizens Advice or Child Line.

If you are 16 or 17 and homeless the Council has to help, but only within certain limits.

You will get a joint interview from housing and social services who will assess your needs and decide how to help you. The Council will always try and help you return to your family if it is safe to do so. We will also try mediation and have a “conflict resolution” service. But we won't force you to go back if you are at risk doing so.

If you are assessed as a homeless person and the law says the Council has to help you, you will be offered temporary accommodation and the Council will try its best to accommodate you near to your social networks but cannot guarantee it. You will have to provide us with information if we ask you - for example a birth certificate, proof of identity, your National Insurance Number and details of where you have been living.

Depending on your circumstances, you may be given accommodation in a hostel with support, or perhaps bed and breakfast for a short time. If you are under 18 it is very unlikely you will be given a flat of your own because you are legally too young to have a tenancy. If you are given hostel accommodation or B&B you will be required to stick to house rules.

If you want to leave home – think first about how you are going to manage. Take advice.

If you are under 25 and single and have to go to a private landlord you will only get housing benefit for one room, and for a certain fixed amount. If the rent is more you will have to pay the extra. You will also have to pay Council Tax, water rates, electricity, gas and pay for all your own food. You will have to look after your home, keep it tidy and do your own washing. Have you thought how much this will cost?

Put simply, you may not have enough money to live on. If you are evicted because you don't pay the rent or are a nuisance to your neighbours this could make you “intentionally homeless” and the Council might not have to help you again.

So get advice BEFORE you decide to leave home.

What if I have been in social services care?

Most care leavers are not eligible for state benefits - including housing benefit - until they are 18. If you are in full time education this will be until you finish it. Social services will have to find you accommodation until you are 18 even if you are homeless.

Research shows that young homeless people are more likely to offend, take drugs or drink to excess, be the victims of sexual exploitation (female and male), and have mental health problems. In other words:

You may be better off seeking help to sort out your problems at home than leaving it.
