do time in ruthin gaol

William Hughes, who shot his wife in a jealous rage, was the last man to be hanged at Ruthin Gaol in 1903. His final night on earth would have been spent in the condemned cell.

You can see it for yourself and, with the help of exhibitions and an audio tour, imagine the horror of incarceration in a place where prisoners were fed on gruel, worked on treadmills and were forbidden to speak to each other.

Children are fascinated by Ruthin Gaol. They can explore the cells, peep through the spy holes and rummage through the activity drawers.
